

“The health of a community is contingent upon its members’ abilities to embrace and tolerate differences. I believe kidSTREAM can be a community system of safety, opportunity and socio-emotional growth for all families and children of diverse backgrounds. I envision kidSTREAM to be a home where we can unite and continue to form healthy life-long relationships and positive experiences. Growing up as the oldest of nine children from a low SES Mexican-American family, and having attained a doctorate in clinical psychology, I value the strengths and health of communities and their positive inter-generational impact on both individuals and systems.”

Martha Martinez-Bravo Psy.D., Director
Psychologist, Scholar, Researcher

- Doctorate in clinical psychology, California School of Professional Psychology at Alliant International University
- Master of Science in clinical psychology, California School of Professional Psychology at Alliant International University
- Bachelor of Science in psychology and social behavior, University of California, Irvine
- Fluent in Spanish
- Ronald E. McNair Research Scholar

Martha has worked with children, couples and families using a systemic theoretical psychological orientation, and has extensive experience in psycho-diagnostic assessment in children. A member of the American Association of University Women and her local Parent-Teachers Association, Martha organizes the annual Women in History program at her children’s school and serves as a class parent. She is married with three children, ages 3, 9 and 11 years old, and serves as a coach on her children’s basketball teams and as a team parent for AYSO.

